Call for Papers and Activist Proposals

Moscow Academic Economic Forum (MAEF)

April 18-19, 2019

Russian Academy of Science and Moscow State University

According to increasing numbers of political economists, the "mainstream" of economic science has been in crisis for the last decade. The qualitative changes that have begun in technologies and the geopolitical configuration, and the nascent changes in economic relations and institutions do not find their adequate reflection in methodology and theory. And, for Russia, these problems are even more acute.

Purpose of Forum - to create space for a large-scale international economic dialogue with the participation of representatives of business circles, the public, and the media. Also present will be those interested in the Forum's agenda – leading world economists, representatives of state and business agencies, and leaders and experts of leading international and domestic and public organizations.

Organizers: Free Economic Society of Russia and Russian Academy of Sciences (with the participation of a number of other Russian and international organizations).

To participate, please, before the beginning of February, send a title/topic and an abstract for your proposed contribution with information about author(s) to the Congress email given below.

Meals at the Congress will be paid for by the Organizing Committee.

Registration fees are not required.
